Rape Charges Dropped for Stonehill College Student

Wednesday Morning, a Plymouth County grand jury failed to indict Kevin Treseler, the Stonehill College student charged last month with raping a child he was tutoring in a classroom in a city school.

According to Bridget Norton Middleton, a spokesman for Plymouth County District Attorney Timothy J. Cruz, the grand jury's decision means the charges against Treseler, 21, of Millis, will not be prosecuted in court.

"This is what the grand jury decided," Middleton said. "We respect the decision of the grand jury and unless there is more information, the case is closed."

The case touched off a controversy over the Brockton school department's procedures for conducting criminal background checks. Kathleen Sirois, the longtime human resources director for Brockton schools, agreed to retire effective June

Bullying Case Strike Deals

Five teenagers have agreed to plead guilty to a minor charge in the bullying of a 15-year-old Massachusetts girl who later committed suicide

The teens are charged in the bullying of Phoebe Prince, an Irish immigrant who hanged herself in her family's South Hadley apartment last year after what a prosecutor called a "relentless" campaign of bullying that included yelling "Irish whore" at her in the school library, posting demeaning comments about her on Facebook and threatening to beat her up.

The harassment charge carries a maximum of 2 1/2 years in a county jail, but the teens could receive probation, said the person familiar with the talks.

The 115th Boston Marathon Breaks Records

Making his Boston debut, Kenya's Geoffrey Mutai finished in 2 hours, 3 minutes, 2 seconds, shattering the Marathon record set last year by countryman Robert Kiprono Cheruiyot, 2:05:52.

It was the fastest anyone has ever run a marathon on record. But USA Track and Field, which governs long-distance races in the United States, said the new world record would not likely be recognized because downhill portions of the Boston course make it ineligible.

sprinting shoulder to shoulder with Kenya's Caroline Kilel to the finish line. Kilel (2:22:36) sprinted past Davila (2:22:38), beating her by just two seconds and falling as she crossed the finish line.

The women's race proved to be a challenge, with Desiree Davila (American)

In the wheelchair race, Wakako Tsuchida (1:34:06) of Japan set a new women's record. In the men's division, Masazumi Soejima (1:18:50), also of Japan, landed his second title since 2007.
